The Last Drop Cafe in Dulwich Hill is showcasing the creative talent of its local primary school. An array of paintings and sketches by budding young artists from Dulwich Hill Public School feature on the Marrickville Road cafe's walls.

Principal of Dulwich Hill Public School, Anita Rooney said that the display provided students with the opportunity to take their art out into the already artistically vibrant community.

Cafe Proprietor, Con Kazantzidis, who has a background in educational psychology and a strong interest in visual art, said he believed children's involvement in art was a good way of developing self-esteem.

"Our display shows that their work is important and also promotes the sense of community that we enjoy in Dulwich Hill," he said.
